This recording was originally intended for release in 1999, but finally wasn't. It's interesting to hear the music now, almost 10 years after the session. Brings up some memories and some thoughts about Wilber Morris who passed away in 2002.

I had seen Wilber in concert with Charles Gayle a couple of years before playing with him and I was very impressed. When we finally met, he turned out to be a sweet, open and warm person who would do his very best to make the music come alive.

I had just met Wilber a few days before we played with Rashid as a trio at the Knitting Factory. We had just done a quartet session with Bobby Bradford, upstate New York.

These were the only two times I played with Wilber.

This record is in memory of a great bass voice.
